Its four editions promoted ethnical diversity and ethnical and cultural equality by means of encouraging young minority people to choose a career within the police structures.

It was funded by the Romanian Government, through DIR. Its activities were conducted in Bihor, Braşov, Cluj, Covasna, Harghita, Mureş, Satu Mare, Sălaj and Sibiu counties and consisted in:

- producing support materials (posters, flyers, leaflets) and distributing them to their intended recipients;
- running information campaigns, among national minorities teenagers, aimed at advertising and promoting a career in the police and the educational offer of the specialized training institutions, as well as at strengthening the link between police and multi-ethnic communities. Over 5000 tenth- and eleventh-grader high-school students took part in the activities;

- organizing four career guidance camps at „Septimiu Mureşan” School of Police Agents Cluj-Napoca, attended by over 200 young students, selected based on their performance in their educational establishments. At the information sessions, topics such as human rights and preventing discrimination were also tackled;
- creating a project Facebook page and producing a video clip and a photo album presenting the camp, both posted on the above-mentioned Facebook page.
